ASQ MISSION

To facilitate continuous improvement and increased customer satisfaction by identifying, communicating, and promoting the use of Quality Principles, Concepts and Technology.

Dear ASQ-0704 members,

Here we are just past the middle of the year. So for our leadership team it is time to take a look at what we have worked on so far and start to look at what we will need to do next year. A couple weeks ago our team spent about 4 hours on a weekend to discuss these. First the good news - we are doing fine, finances are on track, membership is holding steady, and we are accomplishing what we thought we wanted to do. Second the better news - we want to be able to do more for our members. So we are asking questions like can we expand our reach? (We may even try some before the end of the year - Stay tuned.) Can we spread our scholarship/sponsor more? Can we reach students and the upcoming generation to show them what Quality is about. In addition ASQ will reorganize the regions and where sections report through. The specifics of their plan are yet to be seen but we plan to do our best to make it happen. Please watch myASQ.org and our Phoenix Web site to follow the latest updates.

One change that Bill Hoddy (Voice of the Customer Chair) has been working on is the integration of an on-line meeting survey. In order to promote the use of the survey on line, starting this month we provide an additional drawing of the on-line surveys for an additional Raffle prize to be handed out the following month. The process is easy: When you have chance following the meeting Find the Survey page at the section site OR use the QR code on your receipt to scan with a smart phone and answer the question. It only takes a few minutes and we do try to use the feedback to find the speakers and topics you are looking for.

Hint don't forget to leave your contact information so we let if you are a raffle winner.

This kickoff come at an opportune time as our presentation topic is on Sustainability. Dr. Anton Camarota will be discussing "Quality and The Circular Economy: Back to the Future." Instead of the throw away economy of Make-Use-Discard, this philosophy uses an approach of:

- design out waste and pollution,
- keep products and materials in use, and
- regenerate natural systems.

This should be a fun and interactive discussion and we look forward to seeing you there.

Thank you,

Dave Gibson - Chair ASQ-0704, Valley of the Sun.

Topic

“Quality and The Circular Economy: Back to the Future”

An important emerging model for sustainability is the circular economy, which has been adopted by many companies worldwide. This model abandons the conventional make-use-discard linear approach and instead adopts three principles: (a) design out waste and pollution, (b) keep products and materials in use, and (c) regenerate natural systems. The circular approach has several important implications for quality managers such as zero waste, design for disassembly and repair, remanufacturing, and ecological integration. In this fun and interactive presentation we describe the circular economic approach in detail, explore the important implications of this model for quality managers, and examine several case studies that illustrate how companies are using this approach to meet the challenges of sustainable operations.

Changes and Challenges

ASQ has faced and overcome changes and challenges throughout its history. Having successfully navigated rough waters in the past, ASQ is now facing rapid changes in technology and disruption in the quality profession. The Society's pre-transformation research looked at how other associations were responding to similar challenges to shed light on best practices and ways to create additional member value.

Transformation Update

ASQ's transformation will look, sound, and feel different to a member leader than to the average member. And it should, given the part member leaders play in shaping the member experience. These structural and administrative changes lay the foundation for ASQ and its member leaders to partner in evolving the member experience.

A Bridge to the Future

The 20th century provided the greatest technological advances in the history of mankind. Quality, too, has seen significant advances over the past century. During the 2018 ASQ Inspection Division conference, October 18 – 19, 2018, in Memphis, TN, leading experts will explain how quality will serve as a bridge to the future. Individuals and organizations will better understand expanding global supply chains, evolution in management and leadership systems, and effective strategic planning. Three days of workshops precede the conference. Save the dates!
